Qno 2: Precus

Title:

International law is the expression both of state-sovereignty and of its limitations

Precis:

International law is the set of rules governing the relations among states. It is often considered that international law is not law by nature as it lacks social consensus and central authority. Moreover, it is a law among sovereign states which do not accept any authority. So the legal authority of international law is derived say some. However, others believe that international law has potential to create peaceful world. Basically, these two thoughts are not accurate because international law is the compromise between the sovereignty of states and their consent on the rules of international law.

Qno: 7 Translation Date

The rise and fall is the story of every nation. However, national unity, the feeling of destruction and national unity are necessary for this. Japan faced the very difficult time after the second world war. The destruction of atomic bomb had already destroyed two cities. However, the disrespect of the king was more sorrowful than this for Japan. The attitude of General Mac Arthur with the king aroused the feelings of revenge in the hearts of Japanese. Japan started to defeat America in all other fields if not in the way. Finally, this nation ^{was something} ~~was~~ ^{attainably} ~~attainably~~ the lost glory within very little short time. There is a great lesson in this story for Pakistan.
