QUESTION NO: 2

A- How sportsmanship is conceptualized - - - ?

Sportsmanship is conceptualized as being resilient and composed in face of difficult situation. It inculcates the virtues of fair dealing and exercising self control. Being respectful and courageous to accept the results also comes in the spirit.

B- Answer:

The four elements of sportsmanship mentioned in the passage includes being in good form, equality, fair dealing and presence of will power to win. The balanced quantity of these four virtues is emphasized as the absence of any one of them is against the spirit of sportsmanship. The ignorance of any of these leads to imbalance and lack of sportsmanship.

C- Answer:

Excessive desire to win conflicts with fairness and equity. The desire to win lets them compromise on the principles of equity and fairness. The fear of failure conflicts with the spirit. The excess of any one of the virtue i.e "the will to win" is bad.

D. Answer:

Some loser is the one who blames others for their failure instead of focusing on their weaknesses. Their reaction is immature as they shift their failure to others. While bad winners celebrate their win by mocking the self-esteem of their opponent. They highlight the poor performance of the opponent only.

It impacts the true spirit of sportsmanship as the fundamentals of the spirit like respect and self control are compromised.
