Question #2

Sovereignty in between states and International law

Behavior of individuals are different from the behaviors of state, that is called municipal law. While, international law based upon foundation of central authority and its rules. International law is between the state and individual. That's why, professional lawyers deny the legal character of international law. According to them, state should be truly sovereign and no one is above other, otherwise the state is not sovereign. For this issue, theory of consent defines the international law by acceptance ~~by~~ the state fully or partially. Similarly, World Court define the sovereign state has its own wish for any treaty. Some called this sovereignty a shame, but some said it is not. By the help of politicians and lawyers it would ensure the peace on earth.
