4- Conclusion

Democracy is the government of the people, by the people and for the people. The affairs of the government in democracy are run by the representatives of the common people. In short, it can be said that democracy is the rule of the general masses of any society or a state. However, dictatorship is the opposite phenomenon to democracy. It is the rule of one person. Almost majority of the countries in the world have adopted democracy as the form of government and cherished it as the best form of government. On the other hand, the countries of the world have disliked dictatorship as their governments ruling. This is due to the fact that dictatorship is the rule by one person and democracy, on the other hand, has given the right to rule the government to ~~every~~ the ordinary people. The common man has a say in the political, economic and social matters of the country in democratic regimes. So, it is said that democracy even in its weaker form is better than the best dictatorship.

~~Worst~~ <sup>Worst</sup> democracy is better than the best dictatorship because in worst democracy rule of law is followed, ~~account~~ rulers are accountable to the people, and judiciary is independent. The criticism of government can be possible, the foreign direct investments and economic productivity are increased, and people can revolt against tyranny. Moreover, <sup>there would be</sup> a freedom of speech and the voices of common people are heard. Economic policies are made by people and the image of country becomes good. However, <sup>worst</sup> democracy can be converted into good.

democracy by active participation of citizens, by educating the masses, by vibrant social media awareness, and economic productivity. So, the worst democracy is better than the best dictatorship. However, the worst democracy can be converted into the good democracy by the efforts of the people in both the public and private domains.
