Q1

I do not think --- independence & spirit.

Precis:

The author's point of view describing a society suits to London only where each person treated according to his value in company. However in other parts of the country the situation may go beyond intellectual or social values, which gives the impression of arrogance like in Manchester or Liverpool.

2/15

Length and Contradiction is not based on intellect or ideas but money gives a person voice. Man is known by the values, good or bad, he brings to the society. The society of London makes the status of everyone equal, whether a parliamentarian or a lord of acres. Every visitor is judged by his expression, manners and understanding not by wealth or status. Their discourse includes views on voting sense. Personal merit is considered in provinces but not in London.
