

ANSWER # 02

Title: International Law and States Sovereignty

governed by

The behaviors of individuals are governed by norms which are transformed into municipal or domestic law. Likewise the norms which govern the behaviours of states are transformed into international.

However, despite similarity in their names they both are completely different. While there exist centralised authorities to enforce municipal laws, international law is not of binding nature. States agree to observe it according to their convenience. This is the reason that some experts consider it as a sham and deny it the status of law. If states acknowledge international law, then they are not sovereign and if they do not, then it is not the worth to be called law. However, this controversy is resolved by the theory that states when agree to acknowledge some rules to govern their relations, they implicitly acknowledge international law.

This view has been endorsed by World Bank. They argue that if lawyers are provided with opportunity, they could give a comprehensive legal system to the world. However, both the views go to extremes, as international law is a compromise between states sovereignty and self-imposed restrictions and obligations.

ANSWER # 03

I. Ad hominem means that when in a debate an argument is against an individual or a party, the other party instead of countering it starts targeting the person who presented it. Through this tactic, the opponent party discredits the argument by questioning the credibility of the presenter. This is an effective way to change the focus from the real issue.

II. The opponent of Lincoln was an experienced lawyer. He was well-known for his legal know-how. However, Lincoln discredited him by pinpointing to the jury that how can one be trusted or believe to be true when he does not know how to wear shirt by ignoring a common norm. The jury was convinced and gave verdict in his favor.

III. Lincoln tactic was not malicious in the sense that legal practice demand the quality of observing intricate particularities. A person who can ignore a commonly practice norm can also ignore the reality of a case. From the result it can be deduced that it does not matter whether the tactic was malicious or not as the ignorance of the opponent put a question mark on his credibility.

IV. By using hominem, Lincoln took the risk as the opponent could accused him of personal attacks on his personality this could make the jury to give verdict against him. If I were a lawyer, I would have ~~try~~ tried to convince the jury that my dressing could not deprive my client from justice.

ANSWER # 07

The rise and fall is the story of every nation. But for this, there is a need of a sense of national loss and national self respect. After the second world war, it was a testing time for Japan. The wreekages of atomic bomb had already made the cities disolute. But the greater treadgey from this was the humiliation of the King for Japanese. The rude behavior of General Mac Arthur which he adopted towards the King infuriated.

the Japanese by igniting their sentiments of revenge. If not in the battle, they started to defeat America in every other field. In a matter of few decades, they regain their lost status. In this story, there lies a lesson for Pakistan.

One day, a friend visited Hojda and said to Hojda: "I want to borrow your donkey." "I am sorry!" replied Hojda "but I have already lent it to someone else." As soon as he said this, the donkey brayed. "But Hojda, I can hear the donkey. It is the stable." shutting the door in his friend's face, Hojda told with a dignity: "a man who believes the words of a donkey above my words do not deserve to be lent anything."
