Title: International law; limit the sovereignty of States.

International law is different from municipal law as it lack control over states. Many Professional lawyers considered it logically incompatible. If states claim sovereignty and believe all states are equal, then accepting legal bindings may reduce its sovereignty. This is ~~opposing~~ ^{contradictory} theory of consent. As Wimbledon describes that countries compromises on their sovereignty when they signed treaty with states which limit their authority. Some believe international law has limitation while other want a law that ensure peace. However, international law in any case limits the sovereignty of state.
