

04/20

3. Unemployment and Human trafficking.

Outline:

1. Introduction.

Unemployment leads to increased vulnerability, making individuals more susceptible to human trafficking. Addressing unemployment and creating support systems can help combat the issue.

2. Human trafficking: A brief overview.

3. Establishing link between unemployment and vulnerability to trafficking.

- a. Economic challenges lead to desperation. (Case study of Yemen)
- b. Lack of job opportunities increases susceptibility to trafficking. (increased ratio of child labor)
- c. Social and economic disparities leading to increased vulnerability. (people trap in unethical acts)
- d. Impact of Globalization on job market.
- e. Inclusion of AI (unemployment effect)
- f. Population explosion: Competition for survival (illegal transport of organs → earning income)

4. Case studies of developing states:

- a. Rise in human trafficking in Afghanistan, Yemen, Brazil, Ethiopia.
- b. Insight into establishment of link between the two phenomena.

8-

5- Addressing unemployment to combat trafficking: A way forward.

- a. Government initiatives and policies to reduce unemployment.
- b. Creation of sustainable job opportunities.
- c. International collaboration to overcome human trafficking.
- d. Rehabilitation of trafficking survivors.
- e. Introducing strict checks and balance of vulnerable areas.

6- Conclusion.

INTRODUCTION:

The start of human life on the earth was simple based on fulfillment of basic needs. With the passage of time, development of different aspects of life took place. Inclusion of technology further improved the lifestyle. With improved standard of living population increased exponentially. This population explosion introduced the phenomenon of competition among individuals for survival. Today's world faces critical issues of unemployment, poverty, lack of resources and increased volume of human trafficking. Primarily human trafficking refers to the exploitation of individuals through coercion, deception and force exertion for various purposes including forced labor and ~~sex~~ trafficking. Extensive research has pointed towards an established link between unemployment and human trafficking. The lack of job opportunities and other socioeconomic disparities result in forceful indulgence of individuals in trafficking. Globalization has also affected job market rendering a sum of people as unemployed. Artificial machines have also replaced humans adding up to the grievance of issue. The case studies of developing states of Africa, Asia and South America prove the ~~rise of~~ link between two phenomena.

Government policies and initiatives to overcome unemployment will help combat human trafficking. International collaboration for highlighting and eradicating the human traffickers worldwide will be a step towards better world. Unemployment leads to vulnerability making individuals more susceptible to human trafficking.

BODY PARAGRAPHS:

1. The economic challenges faced by an individual lead to desperation. This feeling of desperation indulges the youth in search for income. The vulnerable youth falls prey to luring traps of human trafficker. Yemen for instance has reported immense increase in trafficking incidents due to unemployed population.

2. Increased inclusion and dependency of everyday work chores on artificially intelligent machines adds up to the gravity of situation. The use of AI machines has the potential to replace 300 million full-time jobs according to a survey. The unemployment leads vulnerable inhabitants towards unethical ways of earning such as organ trafficking.

Too short

3. International collaboration to overcome ~~the~~ and reduce the incidents of human trafficking will help combat the issue. The creation of job opportunities for the vulnerable population with the help of developed states will be step towards right direction. Moreover International collaboration on ~~the~~ ^{process of} arresting human traffickers will help get rid of this grave situation.