6- Conclusion

With the advancement in technology and invention of social media apps, it has become very easy for people to distract themselves instantly into a world of perfect pictures, perfect places and perfect lives of social media. Social media has made communication extremely easy and one can talk to anyone thousands of miles away with just a click. However, it has also made human beings addicted to it owing to the perfection it holds and displays. Human brain is not wired for such a huge amount of changing <sup>processing</sup> themes every minute. This has made humans hinged to the screens of their phones while completely ignoring people and world around them. Social media has become an epidemic addiction because it provides people with an escape from difficult and tough real life. Accessibility of cell phones, internet and social media apps has further added to the impact. Moreover, social media apps are designed in a way to keep people mindlessly strolling, as it benefits the stakeholders of companies showing ads on one's feed. Social media addiction has far reaching impacts including attention deficit and mental disorders. It is  $\downarrow$  pertinent measures to curb this addiction (important to take)

In order to ensure a healthy life.
