Cyclic Development of Society.

According to Sheikh Rashid, founder of Dubai, society develops in a cyclic manner. In his opinion, a period of progression is followed a period of regression. He explained this by referring to progression of Dubai from times of his grandfather to his grandson. And predicted that a regression will follow it. In his views, adversity forced men to develop strength therefore creating strong men and great societies. Followed by comfortable life which creates weak men and weak societies, which are unable to handle harsh times. He, therefore, wants to raise warriors, those individuals who have qualities to withstand hard times, not parasites, who relies on others. So, he emphasized that future of countries depend on the qualities of future generation. Hence, his views provide a vision for all societies and especially Dubai that if you want to continue the cycle of growth you must invest on developing a capable and strong individuals, whom he called warriors.
