Q7: Translate the following into English, keeping in view the idiomatic/figurative expression?

Translation of the Text

When you have traveled internationally and transited through airports like Dubai, Qatar, and Kuwait, you must have observed that the atmosphere at the gate for Japan-bound passengers is very peaceful, and they all seem to be dressed in a similar manner, with similar hairstyles and demeanor. You might see the same scenario at the German gates and similarly, at the gates for Malaysia, China, Spain, Australia, and New Zealand, you'll notice a sense of uniformity.

However when you arrive at the Pakistani gate, you'll see a diverse range of people, unlike the uniformity at other gates.

You'll notice a mix of people, some with worn-out faces, children crying, some wearing half-pants and jeans, others in Shalwar Kameez.
