"Resilience Over Comfort: Dubai's Future" Title: Importance of Resilience for Sustainable Progression

Sheikh Rashid sheds light on the circular nature of society evolution.

The trajectory of the evolution started with his grandfather riding a camel and would end at his great-grandson in the same manner. His ideology is that difficult times produce strong men who create easier times, while easier times result in creating weak men which eventually leads to challenging times.

Thus, warriors who are resilient men are required to combat hard times than parasites. The shift from camels to luxury vehicles depicts the progress achieved by Sheikh in Dubai. Yet, the predicted reversal in the future indicates a potential decline. As society progresses, the comfort overrides the need for resilience and eventually decline emerges as the weak men who are products of comfort, fail to handle the prevailing situation. As Dubai progresses, a balance between luxury and character development is essential for long-term sustainability. Sheikh Rashid advocates importance of education and emphasises the need for consistent effort with the adoption of a proactive approach. His exemplary example can help societies safeguard themselves from decline.
