From connecting continents to connecting people, Globalization has made the 21st century world a "global village". Apart from boosting trade, economy and connectivity, it has also given voice to oppressed and marginalized communities via Human Rights movements, social media and so on. But as light is always followed by a shadow, so is Globalization's progress for human rights followed by setbacks. From giving voice and opportunities to marginalized communities, it

Globalization has helped create awareness among people for their right to self-determination. It has helped to inspire people to overthrow their oppressive authoritarian regimes.

Arab Spring, 2011, began in Tunisia and inspired states like Syria and Lebanon to fight against authoritarian regimes. Dhruv Rathee, an Indian YouTuber, used his social media clout to expose the authoritarian regime of Modi and inspired people to use their right to vote wisely.

Arab spring witnessed massive human rights violation.

also it was not an exercise of right to self-determination. That was to change the mode of regime.

Globalization has helped inspire women rights movements and has created economic opportunities for them.

Feminism movements in Pakistan beginning in 1970's have inspired a generation of women to stand up for their rights. The movement itself inspired from American and European movements' books and news. Awareness through social media, news and speeches of influential women worldwide have created a desire in women to stand up for their rights and overthrow the patriarchal dominance.

What role has globalisation played in this?

world. "Black lives matter", a 2020 movement aimed at eradication of killings of black people on the basis of racism. The video circulated on social media where a police officer was seen suffocating a black man using his body weight. The man eventually succumbed to death but inspired a global movement for human anti-racism.

Repetitive Social media and information access aspect has already been discussed.

During the Covid-19 pandemic, WHO's Covax programme vaccinated millions of people creating global immunity and ensuring the right of each individual to access to health care. This underscores the role of globalization in ensuring health and safety for each individual.

Increased connectivity and technological advancement has given rise to the menace of ^{cross borders} terrorism and human trafficking. Organisations such as TLP find safe haven in Afghanistan and carry out terrorist activities in Pakistan. Child trafficking on Pak-Afghan border and drug trafficking have all added to the ^{How is that related to globalisation, no link established} ~~world~~ of globalization. All of this has caused loss of lives, exploitation and child abuses.

Don't start the paragraph with a quotation, fact or reference.

capitalism is capitalism
globalisation is globalisation what do the two have in common. Also the imperialism and through political coercion is different, which one is being discussed here and how does that relate to globalisation?

aptly points out the role of capitalism in furthering imperialism. With the rise of global capitalism due to globalization, capitalists have exploited developing countries for cheap labour and resources. A Core-periphery dependancy creates poverty, food insecurity and health issues in developing (periphery) states. Underpaid individuals and job insecurity are manifestations of global capitalism and neo-slavery.

Not an argument Directly introduce the argument in the topic sentence

A hallmark feature of globalization is that effects in one region are felt in another region thousands of km apart. This can create food insecurity and jeopardize the right of every individual to access to safe and nutritious food as mentioned in SDG's and MDG's. Russia-Ukraine war fought in Europe, resulted in a famine like situation in Africa. In the Asian continent, food prices soared to extremely high level. Wheat prices in Pakistan soared and caused extreme food insecurity in the poor.

Russia Ukraine war is not an effect of globalisation

War is not a feature neither an aspect of globalisation effects of war does not mean effects of globalisation

~~War in one region can trigger immigration / refugee crises in another.~~ The Afghan-

Pakistan refugee crises post 9/11 caused serious burden on Pakistan's resources. Loss of jobs, competition and shortage of food supplies created immense problems for both the refugees and civilians. Brain drain in one state can also cause an increased competition and loss of jobs for civilians of receiving state.

Incoherent, too many points in a paragraph. No structure

Global warming and climate catastrophes have caused displacement of millions, poverty, loss of education, decrease in access to safe drinking water causing violations of basic human rights. Exploitation of resources by capitalists and industrial development cause environmental degradation

How is globalisation related to global warming?

and climate catastrophes in developing and underdeveloped world. Rights of education, access to safe drinking water, gender equality are all violated in the wake of this environmental degradation triggered by globalisation.
