Sheikh Rashid's Vision

"Resilience Over Comfort: Dubai's Future"

Sheikh Rashid, the founder of modern Dubai and a visionary man, said that his ancestors were poor and he and his sons are rich; however, his grandsons would be poor again. This is because easy times kill the potential in people. His prediction to be again poor is due to the understanding of the connection between adversity and prosperity. In difficult times, men develop the qualities of that are essential for survival and progress such as resilience and strength. However, in easy times these qualities get reduced with time and make the environment suitable for hard times again.

Therefore, there is the need of creating strong and resilient societies through education in these good times to ensure a sustainable prosperity. The societies that are lazy consumers should be transformed to a well-equipped strong societies. For this Dubai is investing in human capital, technology, and infrastructure according to the

As Dubai advances, it must balance innovation with the cultivation of resilience among its people.
