"Social Media as a tool of Hybrid Warfare"

expansion of information technology has been the prominent feature of the present century.

The 21st century has seen an expansion of information communication technology. The internet and its confluence with information technology have increased accessibility to media especially social media. On the one hand it has facilitated the people, while on the other hand it has become an important instrument of hybrid warfare. Hybrid warfare is one of the fifth generation war strategy that combines political warfare, conventional warfare and cyber warfare methods including fake news, diplomacy, lawfare, regime change and foreign electoral interventions. In this modern era, social media platforms are frequently used to spread disinformation and propaganda during conflicts or political campaigns. False information, misleading articles and manipulated images or videos can be disseminated rapidly to influence public opinion. For example, during Brexit, various groups used social media to spread exaggerated claims about the costs and benefits of leaving the European Union, affecting how people perceived the issue and ultimately influencing their voting decisions. Besides of shaping people's perception social media provide a platform for coordinating covert cyber operations. Adversaries may use social media platform as vectors for cyber attacks such as spreading malware, phishing scams, or hacking accounts. These attacks can disrupt communications, compromise sensitive information, and undermine functionality of critical infrastructure. These activities pose serious threat to national security, economic stability and international relations. The threat of hybrid warfare is so prevalent that even the phone number of prime minister could not stay safe.

The post reported that prime minister's contact number was among those targeted for surveillance by India using Israeli spyware. Besides the hackers also attacked the FBR data center and brought down all the official tax collection websites for more than 72 hours, this information might be used against state. So such versions of hybrid warfare are a big threat to the security of the country. Hence social media role in hybrid warfare shows how powerful digital platforms <sup>cohesive and well connected</sup> in shaping public opinions, creating division and influencing global events. It is important for users to be critical of the information they see and understand the potential impact of social media in conflicts and political decision
