RAISE WARRIORS NOT PARASITES.

Dubai's founder shared his thought on the cyclical nature of societal development and the future of his country. Hard time creates strong men, strong men creates easy times and vice versa. The cyclical pattern underscores the interplay between adversity and prosperity. In difficult time people do hardwork to achieve certain goals to facilitate their lives by qualities like strength, resilience, etc. But the society become more comfortable, so the achievement of these qualities diminishes, and the process of progress is stopped. The weak society sets the stage for the return of hardships. His call "raise warriors not parasite" is an appeal to ^{instill} strength, and a sense of responsibility in future generations. Warrior ^{possess} the characters of fortitude, ingenuity and preservance, which are necessary to overcome challenges. While parasites are those who rely on others without in shaping the future. By preserving the values of hardwork, self reliance societies can sustain and get more benefit from the existing achievements. This can minimize the risk of societal decline and ensure that prosperity is sustained. With the development of Dubai, it must balance its pursuit of innovation and luxury with a commitment to fostering resilience and adaptability among people. It means that investment should also be on human capital. Sheikh Rasheed's wisdom serves as a reminder that prosperity is not a guaranteed state unless there is a constant struggle of capable individuals. Hard times met with strength and resilience, rather than weakness and decline.
