Q No 2:

Title: Significance of Human Values

Twenty centuries ago, Chinese built the Great Wall of China to ensure peace, but high and thick walls do not ensure peace until the character of supervisors are not good. The utmost thing is to build human character before all other constructions. According to an orientalist, a nation's civilization destroys, if one destroys their motherhood, education system and the reputation of their role models. It ultimately degrades their human values. A nation does not develop, if it prioritizes their artists over scientists and teachers.
