Human Values: The Bedrock of Nation

Title: Building Character Saves Nation

The Great Wall of China was built to prevent the foreign invasions. But the attacks were increased as the corrupt guards opened the doors for the invaders. The Chinese had prioritized the wall building over the character building. For a nation, the later is more important than anything else. Undermining a nation's institutions — family, education, and role models — leads to its destruction. Degrading matterhood and damaging reputation of teachers, scholars, and scientists leave these institutions worthless. The author enquires that who will impart human values in youth in such situation.

A nation is futureless which prioritizes

A nation that prioritizes entertainers over scientists and educators is doomed to fail.
