

Topic: Pakistan fall is moral, not economic

Outline:

Introduction: Pakistan fall is not moral, but economic. It has to strengthen its economy to uplift the morale of the citizens. The people of developed countries are more civilized.

(A) How Pakistan fall is not moral, but economic:

- ① Pakistan's weak economy is unable to uplift the poor and working-class people.
- ② High inequality and discrimination degrade the self-respect of the people.
- ③ The ignorant Pakistani people are unaware about their moral standards.
- ④ Poor working environment of the country systematically degrades the self-esteem of employees.
- ⑤ Poor rule of law compels the poor to beg for money.
- ⑥ Weak accountability and transparency increases immorality among people.
- ⑦ Low literacy rate of the country is sign of ignorance and uncivilization.

upgrade their morale.

⑧ Reduce discrimination and ignorance by providing uniform education to ~~at~~ all.

⑨ Distribute resources fairly to reduce backwardness in the rural areas.

Jaques Drouot said, "A hungry man cannot see us right or wrong. He just see food." currently, most of the Pakistanis are fighting for their basic necessities of life. Inflation is exponentially rising. Even, the upper-middle class barely meets its both hands. People are uneducated. They do not know the difference between right and wrong. They are systematically being degraded in their working environment. The government is paying low salary to the competent employees. As a result, they involve in corruption, ~~and~~ bribery. The country's poor accountability and transparency system increases corruption, robbery, theft and crime rates. There is no rule of law. The citizens do not get justice and equality. Elite groups have the full control on the resources. It ultimately demolish the morale of the citizen. However, there are suggestions to upgrade the morale of the citizens. The utmost need is to create jobs and lucrative opportunities. The country needs to create a conducive environment for foreign investors. It helps the people to get job and fulfill their basic necessities. They become able to educate their children. Educated people are civilized. They do not go against morality. They respect the rule of law. Hence, a developed economy makes a nation civilized.

Pakistan's the biggest issue is weak economy. Citizens are involved in violence, terrorism and crimes, because of poverty. They do not have opportunity to get quality education. According to date, only 6% of total GDP is allocated for education. With 6% of investment citizens even do not get their basic education. Education is a key to national peace. It makes man civilized. Civilized people do not compromise on their morale and ethics. They do not involve in unnecessary conflicts.

In return, it increases mutual co-operation and solidarity. Thus, education upgrade the morality of the citizens.

Similarly, most of the citizens are illiterate. The population is exponentially increasing. Parents are unable to nourish their children. They cannot even provide them the basic necessities of life. As a result, they send their children for work at their early age. As a child labour, they are being exploited by the bosses. Thus, in future they become criminals and extremists. They do not even have know how about morality and ethics. They keep violating rule of the law. It disturbs the whole society. Take example of TTP (Tehrik-i-Taliban Pakistan), a terrorist organization. It uses ~~all~~ the poor and innocent children of Pakistan for suicidal attacks. Their parents gladly send them. Because they get some lump sum amount of money in return. To conclude, it is said that a hungry man has no religion and moral, his religion is food.

In Pakistan, inequality and discrimination is very common. Because, government does not distribute resources fairly. The system is framed is such a way that the rich are getting richer and the poor all getting poorer. It badly effect the national integration of the country. Disintegrated nations can violate the rules of law. It increases social unrest. they go against morality to fight for their rights. the rich people exploit the poor. they do not respect them. It devalues their self-esteem. In return, they become unethical. All in all, the government needs to eradicate inequality and discrimination to upgrade the morale of the citizens.
