Question: 3

Comprehension Questions:

1. Ans:

Patton was a controversial figure in American military history. His aggressive tactics and outspoken views about waging war openly earned him the title of being controversial. Patton openly suggested to wage war against Soviet Union for being a <sup>a</sup> major threat to US security. He did not condemn attack of Nazi's rather proposed to first deal with USSR and US should have moved to attack German Nazis.

2; Ans:

Alan Axelrod, an author of "Patton: A Biography", has tried to explore Patton's perspective of suggesting a war against Soviet Union rather than dominating Nazis. Axelrod argues with ~~some~~ a thought of justifying Patton's views but to some extent. He believed that Patton proposed to wage war against USSR, considering it to be a greater threat than German Nazis.

3; Ans:

"If Patton had captured Moscow," according to Michal Peck, "scenario would have been potentially different."

This capturing might have altered significant outcomes of war and would have prevented Cold War from even happening. Its implications would have been totally different, if Moscow was captured in place of Germany.

4; Ans:

Patton who has been <sup>introduced</sup> discussed as a controversial military figure of American history. is later on complimented with being a thoughtful leader. On one side he is criticised for being aggressive, but on the other side Patton is posed as a figure to be followed by leaders of rest of the world.

5; Ans:

Patton held a view of weakening strong opponents than controlling easy targets. He expressed this view in his perspective of discussing US attack of Germany. He believed that the giant enemy should have been dealt with first, then USA should have diverted its attention to small and weak enemies.

Patton's out of box thinking and idea of controlling strong opposition can be followed by leaders of modern technological world. Leaders of today are striving to conquer world, in this context, Patton's words sound reasonable for such materialistic leaders.
