CENTER PROVINCE RELATIONS: TO COUNTER INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL THREATS:

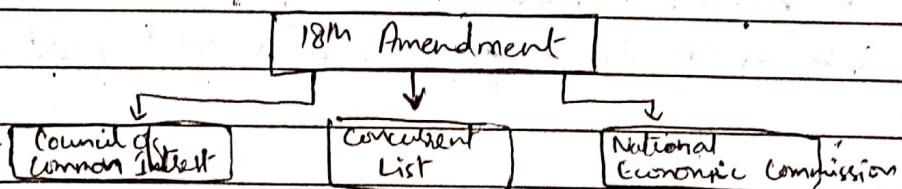

Introduction:

In a federation bounded by provinces center and province plays a significant role in governance and administration. In this respect, a small miscalculation can be posed as a threat from adventurers inside and outside the geographies of governing structure. Pakistan has been a composition of 4 provinces, FATA, Gilgit, and capital Islamabad. Though, it has small number of governing provinces. But is marked by countless challenges on this front.

We will deliberate upon center-province relation here.

"A unity in diversity is something gained"

Center Province Relation in the spirit of 18th Amendment:

The hailed Constitutional amendment in history of Pakistan came at an aftermath of Rabbani-led committee under 2010's National Assembly of Pakistan. This amendment is hailed predominantly for its remarkable provincial autonomy over matters. Among them some are:

i) Council of Common Interest:

Provinces are bounded for intelligence sharing by means of this body. The much needed resource allocation in the departments of finance, railway, power regulation and regional tax collectors are discredited to provinces with strict regard to co-ordination. At this critical juncture of dismal economic position and global change of order. Pakistan is also forced to address intelligence sharing among federating units and Islamabad. The recent wave of insurgency tries to capitalize on these key areas, specifically in underdeveloped provinces. Thus, domestic pressures from ISKP and TTP are such adventures by distorting 18th Constitutional Amendment under Council of Common Interest.

iii) Concurrent List:

The previous amendments were characterized by concurrent list. A framework that proceeds centers role in several key areas: tax collection, tariff regularization in power sector, authority over natural resources extracted and making interprovincial transmission lines. The widespread problem of water sharing from Indus is another major cause of concern.

18th Amendment granted discretion to provinces over these matters. However, disagreement in provinces can only be resolved by strong centers such as on issues of power line and construction of dam.

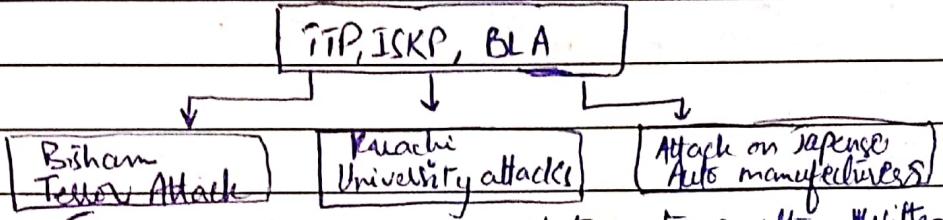

iii) National Economic Commission:

In the same vain a body named NEC was developed in 18th Amendment to deal with the matters of resource allocations and investment matters. Current development funds pledged by Saudi Arabia and Chinese debts are a cause of concern on whom will deploy development funds provinces or center and under which framework. National Economic Commission was meant to restrict 11% of legislators to be appointment from cabinet and hence review with issues of investment and development funds under National Action Plan and PSDP.

INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL SECURITY THREATS IN RELATION TO CENTER-PROVINCE RELATIONS:

In opposition to letter and spirit of strong Center-Province relations countless internal and external threats to security came into place. We shall list them here.

i) Insurgent and Non-state Actors:

The resurgence of non-state actors after withdrawal of US from Pakistan has become more prevalent. There is a strong axis of evil formation between TTP, ISKP and BLA that poses a great threat to domestic insurgent attacks. They are grappling with domestic sentiments on issues of Israel-Hamas war. This was terror attack on Chinese citizens in Bisham and Japanese auto manufacturers can be traced back to weak center-province consensus among key matters. Thus possessing internal threat of non-state actors and insurgents.

ii) Pakistan has become a playground of Proxy War:

The misadventures from middle east has spawned into Pakistan. Resultantly it has become a playground of proxy wars of contesting middle east power. On one hand Pakistan need to build Iran-Pakistan gas pipeline or pay heavy $18 billion fine. Otherwise, recent Saudi pledges on buying Pakistan's State Owned Enterprises as PIA will find a bad fate. The dependencies are capitalized by Iran, Saudi clerics in regions to capitalize on dependencies in the backdrop of weak center-province relation a threat looms large.

iii) A nexus of Eastern neighbours in Pakistan:

A weak consensus of centre specifically in less developed provinces has been marred with disunity. The concerned is fueling the fire of hatred among youth of Balochistan. This will embark a dangerous fallout from secessionist perspective. Though, the province needs immediate attention on economic front. Centre has a huge responsibility to chart-out such foreign security threats by fending ties on key issues.

CONCLUSION:

In conclusion, it can be seen that in the backdrop of 18th Constitutional Amendment. There is a need on key areas of interest that centre, provinces needs to make a consensus on. Otherwise, a bloody and bleak picture of weak economic position can be capitalized by domestic and external adventurists.

ii) Bottom-up model of Development:

The administrative bottom-up model is used as a measure in places where voices from the bottoms needs to be heard. When the goals are clear one can safely embark on objects from top to bottom. However, the case of Pakistan is somehow a different one. Pakistan needs to realize bottom up governance approach such as local governance to understand grievances in the way of integration. Student Politics, Local governance, there are the factors that can widely be useful to materialize national integration pursuit.

iii) Inter-marrying of cultures:

With the advent of globalization international borders are fading. But, Pakistan's regional realities are different. Though, to achieve national integration this is a micro-level measure. But, communities needs to come ~~out~~ out of self-proclaimed supremacy of their races. Inter-marriage in races and ethnicities can diminish such false claims of superiority to pave way for integration.

iv) Unity in Diversity :

The nations of world characterized by strong workforce has come-out of ethnic, religious, and sectarial boundaries. The development of OECD countries lies heavily to the manner they have fused such practices. Pakistan need to carry-out this symbol. Find ways of uplifting middle-class to attain this. Unity in diversity pursuit.

CONCLUSION :

Hence, National Integration is a much sought after goal for the countries, specially like Pakistan. To attain this we need to address some simple measures highlighted above to maintain what we have and capitalize on diversity.
