

Q. NO. 02

Peace: the necessary rational end of rational men

Peace is essential as the world has entered into a nuclear age. It is useless to wage a war in this age because some countries contain more nuclear weapons as compared to other countries. Further, these countries are spending billions of dollars in developing nuclear weapons with varying capabilities. The acquisition of these arsenals, is a major hindrance in developing peace. Some people suggest that peace will be assured with the help of both leaders and citizens. Firstly, citizens have to change their attitude from impossible to possible in achieving peace. Then, leaders must adopt a managerial approach and also with a strong hope, peace can be insured.

②. NO. OF

Recently, in Lahore, there erupted a dispute in a book fair, because there were various stalls there. On these stalls various eatables and non-academic things were being sold. These ~~are~~ recreational things contained the real purpose of the fair. Many of the participants showed disappointment and felt that book fair largely has become a bazaar of goods where little attention were paid on the books, authors and literary dialogues. By giving more attention to these stalls, the debate started about whether the fair was organised for literary purposes or to fulfill the economic interests.
