The fear of darkness of kids is heightened by the tales of ghosts and thieves. Meanwhile, the fear of death in human is ignited by the narratives of the pain a dying man endures. The Children's fear is more of imaginative kind but human fear of death is linked to realistic fear of suffering.

②

A religious and Sacred view of death is that it is a transition from this world to another world. In the other world, man gets punished for the sins he commit in this world.

③

Monks described the physical pain and torture they experienced on the path of spiritual journey to get self purification.

A dying man makes murmuring sounds, his body goes through seizures and his face turns pale. As he passes away, his close ones start weeping, put on their mourning dresses and then various rituals are carried out.

All these events and rituals make death appear more horrible than it would be.
