Peace need not be impracticable.

War makes no sense in an age when great powers can maintain nuclear powers which have long-lasting effects on generations to come. Acquisition of such nuclear weapons can be a source of maintaining peace but is not the only way. The repercussions of war are evident than those of peace. It is useless to speak of peace unless nations and individuals adopt an enlightened approach towards it. People who think war as inevitable makes peace look impracticable. Changing perspectives of peace as manageable can bring hope and help us achieve it.

Recently, a book fair in Lahore is being criticized for promoting more food and other non-educational items than books and educational items, which has neglected its cause. Many attendees expressed their disappointment and felt that a "book fair" has turned into a "food fair" which had less focus and space for books, writers and educational columns. Because of focusing on food stalls instead of debates and promotion of books, a debate started whether this event was fulfilling its educational cause or was just a tactic to promote businesses.
