PART-II

Q. 2 Make a précis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title.

(15+5=20)

I speak of peace because of the new face of war. Total war makes no sense in an age when great powers can maintain large and relatively invulnerable nuclear forces and refuse to surrender without resort to those forces. It makes no sense in an age when a single nuclear weapon contains almost ten times the explosive force delivered by all of the Allied air forces in the Second World War. It makes no sense in an age when the deadly poisons produced by a nuclear exchange would be carried by the wind and water and soil and seed to the far corners of the globe and to generations yet unborn. Today the expenditure of billions of dollars every year on weapons acquired for the purpose of making sure we never need to use them is essential to keeping the peace. But surely the acquisition of such idle stockpiles, which can only destroy and never create, is not the only, much less the most efficient, means of assuring peace. I speak of peace, therefore, as the necessary rational end of rational men. I realize that the pursuit of peace is not as dramatic as the pursuit of war, and frequently the words of the pursuer fall on deaf ears. But we have no more urgent task. Some say that it is useless to speak of world peace or world law or world disarmament, and that it will be useless until the leaders of those nations, perceived to be hostile by us, adopt a more enlightened attitude. I hope they do. I believe we can help them do it. But I also believe that we must re-examine our own attitude, as individuals and as a nation, for our attitude is as essential as theirs. And every graduate of this school, every thoughtful citizen who despairs of war and wishes to bring peace, should begin by looking inward, by examining his own attitude toward the possibilities of peace. First, let us examine our attitude toward peace itself. Too many of us think it is impossible. Too many think it unreal. But that is a dangerous, defeatist belief. It leads to the conclusion that war is inevitable, that mankind is doomed, that we are gripped by forces we cannot control. Our problems are man-made. So let us persevere. Peace need not be impracticable, and war need not be inevitable. By defining our goal more clearly, by making it seem more manageable and less remote, we can help all peoples to see it, to draw hope from it, and to move irresistibly toward it.

Q. 3 Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Forecasting the weather, or trying to find out what it will be like in several day's time, has always been a difficult business. Many different things affect the weather and each one has to be carefully studied before we can make even a fairly accurate forecast. The ancient Egyptians, of course, had no need of this-the weather in the Nile valley hardly ever changes-but people living farther north had to protect themselves and their crops. During a period of drought, when no rain fell for weeks on end, streams and rivers dried up, cattle died from thirst and crops were ruined. A storm could wreck ships and houses, and heavy falls of rain caused rivers to flood a whole countryside. Action in the sky stirred man into action, and in this respect farmers became just as much men of action as were sailors on the high seas. Both had to reckon with the weather-it often upset their plans, sometimes with disastrous results. In early times, when there were no instruments such as thermometer or barometer, man looked for tell-tale signs in the sky. He made his forecasts by watching the flights of birds or the way smoke rose from a fire. He thought that the moon controlled the weather-that it held a lot of water, especially when as a crescent sickle-shaped moon it lay on its back. Even today there are people who think that the sight of the moon lying on its back means that the rain is on its way. Many of the weather sayings are still heard today. I expect you know the one: 'A red sky at night is the shepherd's delight. A red sky in the morning is the shepherd's warning.' Do you believe this? It's sometimes right but more often wrong. If this and hundreds of other sayings like it were true, there would be no need for weather science or meteorology.

Questions:

- What is drought and what are its consequences?
- Does the writer endorse the popular sayings about the red sky?

- iii. Is weather forecasting a science; if so, what is it called?
- iv. Why is it not easy to forecast the weather?
- v. How would the moon help the people in forecasting weather?

حال ہی میں لاہور کے ایک کتاب میلے میں ایک تنازعہ پیدا ہوا، کیونکہ کتب اور ادبی سرگرمیوں پر توجہ مرکوز کرنے کے بجائے وہاں متعدد اسٹالز موجود تھے جہاں کھانے پینے اور غیر ادبی اشیاء فروخت کی جارہی تھیں، جس نے میلے کے اصل مقصد کو پس پشت ڈال دیا۔ بہت سے شرکاء نے مایوسی کا اظہار کیا، اور محسوس کیا کہ "کتاب میلہ" زیادہ تر کھانے کا بازار بن چکا ہے، جس میں کتابوں، مصنفین اور ادبی مکالموں کے لیے کم جگہ اور توجہ دی گئی۔ اس میلے میں کھانے کے اسٹالز پر حد سے زیادہ زور دینے کے باعث، بجائے اس کے کہ مطالعہ اور کتابوں کی فروخت کو فروغ دیا جاتا، ایک بحث شروع ہو گئی کہ آیا یہ تقریب اپنے ادبی مقصد کو پورا کر رہی تھی یا محض تجارتی مفادات کو ترجیح دی جا رہی تھی۔

MOCK EXAM : English (Precis and Composition).

Part - II

Question : 2

Make a precis of the following passage and select suggest a suitable title.

Title:- "Call for Peace in Nuclear Age"

Precis :-

The writer emphasizes on the importance of pursuing peace in the nuclear age. Total wars are senseless as the modern nuclear weapons are more deadlier. Their impacts are far reaching and affect future generations and the planet. Billions are spend on nuclear weapons to create sense of fear. This approach is inefficient and counterproductive. Peace is crucial for humanity's survival. According to the writer, Peace can be achieved by re-evaluating our own behaviors and attitudes. The defeatist view that the war is inevitable must be changed. These views are man-made and can be challenged. By making peace more practical, and by simplifying the goals, we can inspire and motivate collective actions towards peace.
