Passage:

Human beings - - - - - otherwise?

Question / Answers:-

(1) Ans

Human beings fear death as children fear darkness, but in both cases, the fear is amplified by external factors. For children, their fear of darkness grows due to stories they hear about ghosts and thieves, while for humans, their fear of death is heightened by stories of the agony experienced by dying people.

(2) Ans

If a human being regards death as a kind of punishment for his sins he has committed and if he looks upon death as a means of making an entry into another world, he is certainly

Passage:

Human beings - - - - - otherwise?

Question / Answers:-

(1) Ans

Human beings fear death as children fear darkness, but in both cases, the fear is amplified by external factors. For children, their fear of darkness grows due to stories they hear about ghosts and thieves, while for humans, their fear of death is heightened by stories of the agony experienced by dying people.

(2) Ans

If a human being regards death as a kind of punishment for his sins he has committed and if he looks upon death as a means of making an entry into another world, he is certainly

taking a religious and sacred view of death

(3) Ans

The monks described self-inflicted physical tortures as a form of self-purification. Such thoughts written in their books makes a man think that death must be indescribably agonizing.

(4) Ans

Seneca, the Roman Philosopher was of the view that it was not death itself that frightens people but the circumstances surrounding it, such as rituals, appearance of the dying person, and the reaction of those around them. These external factors creates a more terrifying image of death than the event itself.

(5) Ans

The facts that make death appear more horrible include the groans of the dying man, the convulsions of his body, the paleness of his face, the weeping of his friends, the mourning clothes worn by his relatives, and the rituals performed after his death. These elements contribute to making death seem more frightening than it actually is.
