- 1- Man is the Social Animal
- 2- Human Beings - the Social Animals

Existence of human beings alone is not possible for they are interdependent. They need each other for assistance in services: like production of food, making of clothes, building of houses, to pay, and to get paid. Since birth, they need other fellow men in order the form of parents, teachers, and law-makers, to care for them, to educate and train them, and to make laws for their protection and security, respectively. They also need friends to share with them their happinesses and sufferings.
