Recently, a controversy arose at a book fair in Lahore. Because instead of focusing on books and literary activities, there were many stalls, where food and non-literary items were being sold. Which has put the original purpose of the festival behind. Many participants expressed disappointment. And realized that the "Book fair" has mostly become a food market. Less space and attention was given to writers and literary dialogues. Due to over emphasis on food stalls in this fair, instead of while study and the sale of books were promoted, a debate arose as to whether the event was serving its literary purpose or merely prioritizing commercial interests.

Judge Thompson appeared in court, seeking compensation for wrongful termination. He affirmed that he believed his dismissal was unfair.

The judge noted that Thompson had been employed for only eight months, and under the law, employees with less than a year of service were not eligible for relief unless evidence of discrimination or a specific Rights violation existed. Thompson insisted that his rights had been violated, but the judge explained that without such grounds, relief could not be granted. Thompson asked if there were any other options, but the judge regretfully stated that his hands were tied by the law. With no further recourse, Thompson accepted the decision, and the judge dismissed the case.
