Q. No. 7

Translation:

Recently, a controversy broke out in Book Fair in Lahore, because food stalls and non literary things stole the spotlight and sold out rather than on literary activities, that had defeated the original purpose of the fair. Many participants expressed their disappointments, and felt that the "Book fair" has become a food festival. That lacks attention for books, authors and literary dialogues. As the food stalls became center of attention, there rose a controversy that rather the focused attention should be on selling out of the books, there rose a controversy that the festival approached its literary success or it was just a fair trade opportunity.

A new Age of Nuclear Weapons: A threat to Peace

Nuclear Weapons: A threat to Peace?

The author talks about peace in an era of developed nuclear weapons that can affect even the unborn generations. Billions of dollars are being used to acquire nuclear weapons to assure peace. The author states that it will be useless to talk about world peace without changing our attitude. Changing of attitude is necessary as individuals and as nations. As many of us believe that peace is impossible and war is inevitable. We have to redefine our man made problems into manageable and practicle so people can see hope from

it.
