Words = 113

Title:

War is more expensive than peace.

Keeping in view the trends in modern ~~era~~, nuclear war is totally irrelevant. Because the consequences of nuclear war are far-reaching, it can affect the generations to come. It ~~is~~ also affects economic conditions since huge money is spent on acquiring weapons. On the other hand, the pursuit of peace is easier than war. Some opine that efforts to bring peace are useless if leaders don't change their attitude; however, the writer thinks that the peace is attainable if people, as individuals, focus on their attitude toward peace. Many views this approach to peace 'ideal' but it may be made practical if objectives are clearly defined that give people inspiration and hope for peace.

Q.7

Recently, a conflict emerged in a bookfair in Lahore, because, instead of giving heed to books and literary activities, there were several stalls where food and non-literary stuff were sold which blurred the real objective of the fair. Many of the participants expressed their regret and felt that "BookFair" has become a food street where less attention and place were given for books, authors and literary activities. Due to much focus on food stalls in this fair, a discussion was started that whether this event was achieving its objectives or just priority was given just to business interests.
