Precis: War and Peace a double-edged sword

The writer, while talking about the possibility of peace, depicts the far-reaching impacts of war. Unlike World wars I and II, today a single nation having nuclear power, can destroy almost all the earth. However, it is not necessary only a nuclear explosion ^{world} brings destruction but nuclear exchange can harm the whole world. To reduce this threat, writer said, all people should change their attitude. Also, the attitudes of the leaders engage in such pursuit of wars ^{should be changed.} The writer said emphasizing in the pursuit of peace, everyone should believe peace is possible. If they believed peace is unreal then it will lead to the conclusion that war is inevitable. War and peace are simultaneous forces but can be restrained by clearly defining our goals, the writer said.
