

PART # 2Q#2 Answer:People's Believe about War

The author argues that he favours peace against the war because of the power of modern weaponry. The great powers has established nuclear deterrance and have the ability of bombardment more than allied forces collective had in world war II. Moreover, the radiations of nuclear weapons will not only destroy the current generation but also the future generations. In modern world, only creating deterrance is consider a viable way of establishing peace. However, it is an ineffectient way of doing so. The author says that some people believe that the peace is only possible if world leaders change their attitude and they cannot do much about it. The author argues that to achieve peace people must change their pessimistic attitude that peace cannot be achieved because this is what leads to war. People must devise a path to build hope among people that peace is achievable and war is a man-made phenomenon.
