Q-NO 7:

Recently, a controversy arose in the book festival of Lahore. Apart from books and literature activities, there were various stalls present where food and non-literature things were being sold. This activity had hidden the real purpose of this festival. Many participants felt bad and they felt that 'Book Festival' had turned into food market where books, writers and literature debates had less importance. Due to too much attention on food stalls in this festival, despite promoting study and the sale of books, a debate had started that either this function was fulfilling the purpose of literature or the trade benefits were the only priority.
