

Title: Human being — a Social Animal

Humans cannot live alone in this world. They need to surround themselves with someone to benefit their body, soul and spirit. People work for each other to earn their livelihoods. A person is connected to others in every phase of his life, but the nature of association varies from childhood to adulthood. With growing interaction, he needs multiple associations to secure his rights and interests.

