Title:-
"Dependence on others: A fundamental Aspect of Life"

From birth, humans are dependent on others for survival and well-being, relying on people for clothing, shelter, and food. We earn our living by working for others, just as they work for us. As children, we need the care of parents, teachers, and guidance to learn a trade. Even in adulthood, our rights and comforts are secured by laws made long ago. Throughout life, we rely on friends for support in times of sorrow and to share in our happiness.
