Peace is necessary because of the new face of war. Total war makes no sense in this age, where great forces having nuclear weapons can not be held back and controlled. It makes no sense because the deadly poisons of the nuclear weapon can be spread to ^{the} other far away poles of the world through wind, water and air. This will affect the ^{yet} generations unborn as well. Today billions of dollars are spent every year on weapons to keep one at peace and deterred. But surely, it is not the most efficient means of pursuing peace. Peace is the utmost objective, as the necessary rational end of rational men. Attaining peace is not a herculean task. Some believe that talking of peace is useless until the leaders, who ^{are} perceived to be hostile, adopt a more enlightened attitude. It is necessary and ~~the~~ ^{these} leaders can be helped to attain peace. But the thoughts of individuals as an ~~nation~~ should be checked and changed, for individuals togetherly make nations. A Every graduate of this school of thought who believes in peace should start from himself, examining the attitude towards the possibilities of attaining peace. First, one should start from himself to bring a change in the world. Some believe it is unreal and impossible, but this is the most dangerous and defeatist belief. This belief leads us to the conclusion that war is inevitable and peace can not be attained by any means. It means that man is helpless and can do nothing about it. But by defining one's goals more clearly, by making it seem manageable and easy, peoples can be helped to see it and be hopeful to move irresistibly towards it.
