Judge inquired Mr. Thompson that if he was seeking wrongful termination. Plaintiff agreed saying that he had been unfairly dismissed. Judge questioned back that if he was let go after eight months, to which he agreed and then judge informed him that employees with less than a year were not eligible for relief unless there was evidence of discrimination or specific rights violation. He said that he felt his rights had been violated. Judge agreed to his stance but refused to do something without those grounds as he could not. Plaintiff reassured that if there was <sup>no</sup> something he could do, to which judge nodded and emphasized that his hands were tied by the law. He understood, obliged him and judge had dismissed the case.

were being sold, which overshadowed the real essence of the literary fest. A lot of participants condemned it and felt that the 'Book festival' has mostly been transformed into a food festival where less space and heed has been ~~payed~~ <sup>allocated</sup> to the books, literary writers and literary debates. In this festival excessive attention has been given to the food stalls despite of focusing on its ~~evaluation~~ and the book sale. This fuelled a debate that if this festival was <sup>really</sup> fulfilling its literary essence or merely prioritizing the profit driven businesses.
