"The Value of Purpose Beyond Money"

For well-educated, intellectual, or brave individuals, money is not the primary focus, just as dinner is not main purpose of a healthy person's life. While making money life should be enjoyed, it is secondary to one's true calling. Soldiers, clergymen, and doctors prioritize their duties over financial gains, preferring to excel in their respective fields rather than maximizing profits. For these professionals, their work comes first, with compensation being important but still secondary to their core mission.
