

Money is the Second Objective

All wise and courageous men cannot prioritize money over their goals despite desiring for it. They will rather focus on the sensation of their achievements. For instance, a good soldier does not fight for the reward of the win and a clergyman does not preach for money. If a good doctor had to choose between the health of his patient and the money in case he dies, he will definitely choose the first option. Shortly, all gentlemen prefer their work over the money.
