Title :- Passion comes before money

The sole purpose of a literate, intelligent or brave man in life is not merely making money. As a healthy person likes food, but it is not only thing in his life. An intellectual person likes earning but sense of achievement makes him more happy.

The real happiness of a soldier lies in winning battles though he is not paid extra for it. A priest's purpose of life is to spread Divine's message even though he is not paid for it.

The main goal of a doctor is to cure patients rather than getting fee. A good doctor would prefer to cure patient for free instead of killing him for money. All skillful men always keep money second-though very important; but comes always after passion.
