

History is full of such successful people who started their life in extreme difficult circumstances but later on, they became among the successful and famous personalities of the world. Success, respect, and fame are not handed over silver platters, but wealth can be — One condition is necessary for that too: your ancestors must have property, only then wealth will be inherited to you. You can buy worldly materials by wealth, but can not buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes decades for a person to earn respect; one moment is enough for becoming notorious or controversial.
