Making money is liked by every healthy person. However, few brave and intellectual individuals money is not the sole purpose of their life. Certainly, there are other important goals for them. For instance, a solicitor or a clergyman, their passion is doing their work rather than getting money. Another example is of doctors. A doctor who is mettle and well-educated, his main concern is to cure the patient rather than just paid for his work. When he has a fair choice he would cure the patient with less fee than billing him.
