Title:

Duty comes first and then money

Only making money in life is not the main objective of an educated and intellectually well-versed man. But everyone like to have it. For instance, a soldier's mission of life is to win battles, while a clergyman's life's mission is to preach but they are not supposed to be paid off for winning battles and preaching others respectively. Likewise a doctor's mission is to cure patients not to find ways to extort money from them. Hence, all the intellectually wise people prioritize their work and then money despite of its importance.
