

Title: work rather than money, a good person priority.

A well-civilized person does not always keep money the ultimate aim of his/her life because such a people always prefer their work. Although all good people like money, but they enjoy their work through which they earn money. For instance, a good soldier wants to win the battles not to make money. Similarly, a clergyman's goal is to preach not to earn. Another such example can be found in the life of a good doctor because he/she always decides to cure the sick rather than to exploit them. One can find a single lesson from the life of a good person: their work is first, and fee second.
