

Duty Comes First Before Money

A sensible person does not keep money the center of his thoughts. Likewise, all healthy people like food; however, eating food is not their only objective in life. Similarly, a good soldier prefers winning battles to getting paid for them. The prime objective of clergymen is to preach than to earn money. Moreover, the motto of doctor is to cure sick people than to charge fees for it. Thus, for all professional people, ^{their} work takes precedence to money.
