

Purpose Before Profit: The mindset of educated and brave men

The author emphasises that wisdom and education make a man purpose-oriented rather than materialistic. He does not crave for the money his job rewards instead desires to experience the satisfaction his job brings. His main goal of life becomes serving for a cause, not making money. The fearless and well-taught men consider money important but not more important than their jobs.

(63 words)