Title: $ Money doesn't buy happiness

Money is not the main objective of many people. Such that healthy people like their dinner but its not the main purpose of their lives. Likewise sound minded people like making money but making money from their dream job has sensation of winning it. For example a soldier is glad of his pay but he feels much happy to fight in battles rather then only getting good pay. Similarly for a doctor treating a sick patient matters more than fees. Anyone who priorities his work more, who is trained well, was worth ~~of his~~ of his work and then money matters at second, although money is important but always at second.
