

Title :: True Professionalism

A true professional never consider making money his prime object, he just take it as source of livelihood. For instance, a soldier fights, not because he is paid for it but because he loves to win battles. Similarly, a doctor gives treatment to his patient for motivation rather than the fee.

They give importance to their profession rather than money.