

Title: Work Before Money

A well-educated and brave person does not focus on making money as their main goal, just like people don't live just to eat, though they enjoy it. Earning money is important, but it shouldn't be the top priority.

For example, a good soldier focuses on winning battles, not just getting paid. A clergyman cares more about serving others than earning money.

Similarly, doctors want to heal their patients, not just earn fees. For all dedicated professionals, their work is more important than money, though money still matters.
