

Title: With Selflessness, Comes Greatness

The life goal of a great person is not to gain personal profit only but to facilitate others first. For example, the mission of a patriot soldier is to fight in battle field, and he is contented with his pay. Likewise, the cleric's objective is preaching, not earning. Similarly, sympathetic doctors are determined to cure the ill rather than only charging fee from patients. Hence, money is important even for devoted people, but they always prioritize their duty first.
